INTRODUCTION

Medellín (Colombia), was the venue of the 49th General Assembly of the Organization of American States (OAS) from 26 to 28 June 2019, during which issues were tackled that are currently affecting the Americas. Without a doubt, one of the key issues discussed was the complex humanitarian emergency in Venezuela and the migratory flows it has created. According to statistics from the United Nations Refugee Agency (UNHCR), until June 2019 around 4 million Venezuelan nationals have abandoned their country due to the social, political and economic crisis in the country, which is not only affecting millions of Venezuelans but also the countries in the region that are receiving large numbers of Venezuelan migrants. Colombia, which shares a more than 2,200 km long border with Venezuela, is currently one of the main recipient countries with more than 1,4 million Venezuelan migrants, according to statistics from Migration Colombia (July 2019).

The General Assembly is the appropriate place for improving coordination between governments, international organizations, civil society organizations and other actors who aim to provide a coordinated response to the crisis.

Taking into account the above, 31 Venezuelan civil society organizations that are based in the four regions of the continent (North America, Central America, Caribbean and South America) have come together for the first time in the form of the Coalition for Venezuela (Coalición por Venezuela in Spanish), with the aim of making known their work, the challenges faced by the migrant population, and the projects that they intend to carry out with the backing of all stakeholders.

The Coalition for Venezuela comprises organizations with a long track record and a broad representation of the Venezuelan diaspora in the different regions and countries, including Canada, the United States of America, Puerto Rico, Costa Rica, Colombia, Venezuela, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Uruguay, Argentina and Chile. Currently, the coordinating organization of the Coalition is Venezuelans in Barranquilla (Venezolanos en Barranquilla in Spanish) with its head office in Barranquilla, Colombia.

From 26 to 28 June, these civil society organizations took part in the First Assembly of Venezuelan Civil Society Organizations in the Americas (in Spanish: I Encuentro de Organizaciones de la Sociedad Civil Venezolana en las Américas – EOSCVA), an independent event that took place at the same time as the General Assembly of the OAS. The objective of the meeting was to establish, consolidate and strengthen relations, alliances, synergies and agreements between the meeting's participants, which included government representatives of OAS member states, representatives of states in other continents, international cooperation organizations, Venezuelan civil society organizations and media representatives.

The Venezuelan crisis today affects, in one way or another, all countries of the hemisphere. Of course, not all developments are negative for the countries that receive Venezuelan migrants, and there exist interesting studies that point to certain benefits. However, today we would like to focus on the crisis and say that we, as Venezuelan civil society organizations spread all over the continent, are aiming to resolve it. We refuse to limit our efforts to requesting assistance. The Venezuelan civil society is organized and ready to participate as a key actor in the search for a solution and doesn't want to just passively receive the help of brother nations and international organizations.

Ladies and Gentlemen
Secretary General
Under-Secretary-General
Heads of Delegation
Friends,

For the first time, such a large number of Venezuelan Civil Society Organizations are participating in a General Assembly of the OAS, like the one that is taking place today in Medellín, ensuring a broad representation of Venezuelan migrants currently living in North, Central and South America and the Caribbean. We have created the Coalition for Venezuela, which already counts 31 member organizations. It is fitting that this milestone is being reached in Colombia, the main recipient of Venezuelan migrants and refugees.

But what are the objectives of our organizations? What does the Venezuelan civil society want?

To provide comprehensive assistance to migrants, including food, medicine, housing and education.

To inform, advise and direct migrants to entities that provide assistance.

To provide integration and sociocultural development spaces with the aim of strengthening integration and social cohesion within host communities.

To support the entry of migrants and refugees into the labor market in order to contribute to the development of host countries.

Considering the above, and taking into account the complex humanitarian emergency taking place in Venezuela and the resulting migratory flows, we propose to the General Assembly of the OAS the following:

To grant refugee status to the Venezuelans that are leaving their country.

To formulate, design and implement comprehensive public policies in the region with the aim of assisting migrants and refugees.

To recognize and include civil society organizations as key actors in the coordination of the humanitarian assistance provided by governments and international organizations.

God bless the American nations. We hope that the OAS and the governments will fulfill their historical duty and that civil society will be a key actor in the search for a solution to this grave crisis. Thank you very much.

26 June 2019.

METHODOLOGY OF THE MEETINGS

CONCEPT NOTE

This section presents the methodology of the meetings that took place during the First Assembly of Venezuelan Civil Society Organizations (CSOs) in the Americas. In these meetings, the member organizations of the Coalition for Venezuela shared and analyzed their current needs, challenges and capacities within a sectoral matrix (migratory status, health, labor market, education, housing, food security, protection, and others).

The First Assembly of Venezuelan CSOs in the Americas used as a starting point the inputs of the representatives of the Coalition for Venezuela member organizations as well as the results of a survey that was carried out in order to assess the current situation of each organization.

OBJECTIVE

To promote the collaboration between Venezuelan civil society organizations, governments, and international cooperation organizations in the design, coordination and execution of public policy proposals and multisectoral responses at local, national and regional level.

SPECIFIC OBJECTIVES

- To facilitate coordination between Venezuelan civil society organizations, governments and international cooperation organizations that provide humanitarian assistance to Venezuelan migrants and refugees across the Americas.
- To establish working groups with participation by the different organizations and agencies.

- To strengthen and consolidate relations between Venezuelan civil society organizations in the Americas.
- To promote the creation of support networks between the different Venezuelan civil society organizations in the Americas.
- To strengthen Venezuelan civil society organizations in the Americas through the sharing of experiences, knowledge and good practices.

INVITATION

In order to guarantee the active, fair and constructive participation of all convened actors, an invitation to the First Assembly of Venezuelan CSOs in the Americas was sent five weeks before by email. Subsequently, two updates to the agenda were sent. Finally, the methodology of the meetings was shared five days before the event.

METHODOLOGY OF THE MEETINGS

Each point of the agenda was designed with the aim to interact with the representatives of entities involved in the response to the complex humanitarian emergency in Venezuela and the resulting migratory flows that are affecting the countries of the region. Moreover, the objective was to formulate and analyze proposals to influence public policies that affect the coordination and execution of joint strategies between governmental entities, international organizations and civil society organizations.

The meetings started with a presentation by Coalition for Venezuela on the results of the survey for the profiling of the civil society organizations that form part of the Coalition. Moreover, and in order to open the discussion among participants, the current challenges that Coalition members are facing were presented.

Each representative had 15 minutes to present their organization's proposals. The representatives could also join any of the discussions as observers if they wished to do so, as long as there was enough space in the meeting room.

The format of the Assembly of Venezuelan Civil Society Organizations in the Americas followed the guidelines contained in the rules and regulations of the Coalition for Venezuela.

MINUTES OF MEETINGS

The information shared by meeting participants and a synthesis of each meeting were noted down in a specific format (see Annex A).

Additionally, information on each participant was recorded in an attendance sheet (see Annex B).

DEFINITION AND ASSIGNMENT OF ROLES

All meetings were facilitated by a moderator and included a spokesperson and a rapporteur representing the civil society organizations.

Spokesperson: The spokesperson was in charge of opening the meeting, welcoming the participants, presenting the meeting agenda, and introducing the moderator.

Moderator: The moderator was in charge of managing the time for each point of the agenda. The moderator facilitated the discussion and synthesized the contributions made by the participants in order to come up with a final message.

Rapporteur: The rapporteur was in charge of recording the minutes of the meeting and supporting the moderator in the application of the meeting methodology.

CLOSING OF MEETING AND CONCLUSIONS

The moderator invited each participating entity to weigh in on the key discussion points of the meeting and to make any other contribution that helped fill information gaps. The agreements that were reached during the meeting (or the lack thereof) were recorded in the minutes of the meeting, a copy of which was sent to the participants by email.
